A family feud of long standing was settled at a preliminary hearing before Justice Hill, Gettysburg, Saturday afternoon. Jane Shaffer of Latimore township, was the plaintiff in three actions in which she charged Delah Myers, Martha Myers and Willis A. Myers, all of Latimore township, with assault and battery. The alleged acts were said by the Shaffer woman to have occurred July 12, 1922, which made the information almost a year old. At the conclusion of the hearing, Justice Hill dismissed the case against Willis A. Myers for lack of evidence, and dismissed the other two actions, dividing the costs of $25 equally between the plaintiff and the defendants.

The barn on the farm of Spencer Snyder, Upper Huntington, was struck by a bolt of lightning on Tuesday week. Shingles, boards and posts were ripped from the building but no fire resulted. A cow chain hanging in the path of electric current was melted and the links fused together, dispelling the prevailing opinion of a "cold stroke." The family were in the kitchen and were partially stunned by the lightning.

MARRIED MAN AND WOMAN DEPART FROM HEIDELSBURG

Declaring emphatically she would not take him back, Mrs. W. J. Shepard, of Heidelberg, Friday for the first time told the story of the faithless of her husband, who left his home Wednesday morning, accompanied, according to Mrs. Shepard, by Mrs. Haydn Kemper, also of Heidelberg. Neither has been heard from since Shepard wrote a letter to his wife. The letter was postmarked Gettysburg. For a number of years, Shepard conducted a general store on the square in Heidelberg. "On the first of June," Mrs. Shepard said, "he sold out to G. S. Reert, also of Heidelberg, for about $7,500." Apparently Shepard had contemplated his present action for some time, since it was less than a week after the sale of the store had been consummated that he drew all his money out of the bank, with the exception of $1,000, which he left on a checking account for Mrs. Shepard, and left for parts unknown.

"My husband and I have been married 24 years," Mrs. Shepard continued, "and I have always been faithful to him. I never gave him any reason for his present conduct. He is 43 years old." According to Mrs. Shepard, Mrs. Kemper, who she says she believes accompanied her husband, is about 40 years old. "The Kemper have seven or eight children," Mrs. Shepard said. A letter from her husband, she says, gives no reason for his action. He left no intimation in the letter of where he was going, or of when or if ever he would be back. The letter simply informs Mrs. Shepard that he is going away and that he has left $1,000 in bank for her. Shepard and Mrs. Kemper left in the former's touring car, according to Mrs. Shepard. She said she feared it would cost too much to put the police on the trail of her missing husband.

Judging from Mrs. Shepard's conversation, the only reason she would like to have her husband back in Adams county again would be to lay charges against him and "see him get his just deserts." Mrs. Shepard is not downcast apparently with the prospect of living alone, but she is most bitter "I have no good for that woman," said Mrs. Shepard. "I hope they never come back, but I would like to see both of them get their just deserts."

Mrs. Shepard will have public sale of personal property on June 30th.

BASE BALL

New Oxford's semi-pro championship aspirations were given a severe set-back on Saturday afternoon on the local diamond when the Capital City Giants of Harrisburg rode roughshod over Manager Jack Miller's aggregation to the tune of 11 to 1. The local nine were minus the services of "Cooney" Lawrence, rf, who has signed to play with Taneytown in the Carroll county league. Essick took Lawrence's place and batted well. Whitey Woodward, 2b, who was hurt on Memorial Day, could not play up to his usual calibre and many safeties fell around the middle sack. What the New Oxfordians lacked in pep the colored boys more than made up for, and the crowd enjoyed the exhibition they put up. It is hoped Mgr. Miller will get 'em here again this summer.

"Lefty" Shoap was touched for a number of safeties, tho several should have been cut down. New Oxford failed to hit opportunely and neglected to play inside baseball, for instance batting into various double plays when sacrificing would have helped materially. The locals will journey to Carlisle on Saturday. Hollinger and Plowman, of Hanover, are expected to be in the line-up from now on.

The New Oxford Shoe factory defeated the Livingston Shoe factory on the local diamond on Friday evening before a large crowd. The score was 13 to 1. Features of the game were the batting of "Joey" Kaiser, the sliding of "Jesse" Miller and a home run by Charley Hensel.

"Chick" Raff on Saturday afternoon fanned 17 Mt. Miseryites at Biglerville and the latter team won, 5 to 1, in the 1st, 4th and 7th innings. Raff fanned the side. "Monk" Smith's double brot in Klunk with Mt. Misery's only run. Bender pitched for Mt. M., and allowed 9 hits.

With Greyson Weigle pitching, York Springs recently defeated Arendtville, 7-6. "Lefty" Shoap, N. O.'s pitcher, played 2b for the latter team and got his usual hit and run.

Smith's Sluggers of McSherrystown defeated the Paradise orphans in the second game of a series Saturday afternoon at Paradise, 18 to 4.

The McSherrystown Athletic club defeated the Bonaeuville nine in a baseball game played at Bonaeuville over the weekend by the score of 4-3 after a battle which lasted 17 innings. John G. Keffer, Villanova college, twirled for McSherrystown, being home for the summer.

Aspers on the home grounds Saturday afternoon walloped the Clearview A. C., of Hanover, to the tune of 18-8.

The Hanover Red Men defeated the Littlestown nine at that place, on Saturday, 5 to 2.

THE REV. C. W. BAKER HONORED

Degrees were conferred yesterday by Rev. Dr. J. A. Clutz, as acting head of Gettysburg college upon Prof. M. Coover, of the Seminary, L.L.D.; Wm. L. McPherson, New York, Litt. D.; Prof. H. C. Allenman, of Gettysburg, D. D.; Rev. Charles W. Baker, of Maytown, formerly of New Oxford, D. D.; Rev. M. G. Rietz, of Hartwick, N. Y., D. D.; Rev. Henry W. Snyder, of Johnstown, D. D.; Rev. Ross H. Stover, of Philadelphia, D. D., and V. Bernack, Siems, of Baltimore, Civil Engineer.

The Greenridge S. S. will hold their picnic on Saturday afternoon, July 21st, in Warren Baucher's woods, near 700, followed by a festival in the evening. The woods will be lighted by the Genco Light Co. The New Oxford orchestra will furnish music for the occasion. Everybody is welcome.

BOYS CHASE ROBBER(?)

A suddenly discovered light in the cellar under the Harris store, Center Square, Wednesday night at 11 o'clock, led Melvin Leppo and Ed Lough to look out for robbers, with the result, as they claim, that they spied a man dressed in a dark suit going out the alley at the north end of the Livingston building. Giving chase, Leppo states he fired at the culprit going over J. E. Kepner's fence and later in the vicinity of Mrs. R. M. Elcholtz's barn, at which place a second robber joined the first, whereupon both disappeared. J. F. Rickrode, district manager for Harris Bros., made an examination of the cellar, but found nothing disturbed and no way for anyone to get out except up the front steps. He is of the opinion the light was not extinguished at closing time when his son, Cyril, brot up a few boxes. "Ricky" says he has no opinion concerning the object chased by Leppo and Lough, tho it is generally tho't to have been a big black tom cat.

Ed's hair was so stiffened as a result of the experience that he had to get it cut with an electric clipper.

A WORTH WHILE SUGGESTION

A citizen of New Oxford suggests that the School Board take into consideration the purchase of the Lutheran church building for the purpose of starting a first-class high school here in 1924. It is understood the Lutherans wish to build a new edifice. With Hanover and Gettysburg high schools closed to outsiders it is that an arrangement could be made to get eastern Adams county to back a move to institute a first-class school here. To build would involve many thousands, and it is tho't the Lutheran church could be bot reasonably and be easily remodeled for school purposes. With the Hampton pike scheduled to be rebuilt and the New Chester and Irishstown roads also listed for eventual improvements, New Oxford, on the Lincoln Highway, seems the logical place for a central high school for the eastern end of the county. Think it over.

This school will be open to all children of New Oxford and vicinity. All the daily sessions begin at 9 a. m. and close at 12 o'clock noon. There are no sessions in the afternoon. The standard course of study will be the curriculum for all grades. No admission will be charged. This school will afford a new opportunity for all children of school age as well as high school young people. The school will be in charge of trained and experienced teachers.

COMMUNITY SERVICE

The last community service for the season was held on Sunday, J. S. Wise, of Philadelphia, delivered a splendid address. The attendance was good and the singing by the combined choruses under the leadership of Dr. W. R. Snyder was exceptionally fine. New Oxford has now had one season of community services which united the people, aided good fellowship and proved that the good people of New Oxford and vicinity can render great and good services like the progressive people in other sections of our great country.

BALL PLAYER SERIOUSLY HURT

While playing ball in Irishstown on Sunday, Wilmer Sell and Peter Brown, of Pennville, collided in running after a fly ball with the result that Brown sustained a blackened eye and Sell was knocked unconscious. The latter had to be taken to his home and was confined to bed for a few days. His condition on Sunday evening was reported to be serious.

Sell is again able to be out. He was playing first base and Brown was catching. The two struck their heads together.

CHERRY BLOSSOM

ONCE on a branch of a cherry tree there was under the soft bark hidden a little Cherry Blossom waiting for the time to come when it could go out in its pretty pink and white gown and show itself to the world.

There were, of course, many of these little blossoms, but this particular Blossom did not like to wait! she wanted to go at once.

So one soft warm morning she peeped out. "Oh, it is summer already," she cried. "I knew it must be time, and here are all of my sisters sitting inside waiting. I shall be the first to show the color of our new gowns."

"If I wait until the others appear who is to admire me? We all will be admired together. I shall not wait for them; I want to be admired all alone."

So this foolish little Cherry Blossom came out the next day in the sun. She did not flit out her skirts at first, for it was not quite as warm as she had thought.

Gentle Breeze floating by stopped to speak to her. "I am afraid you are too early, Cherry Blossom," he said. "My brother, North Wind, has not gone home yet; he is only napping for a day or two, resting for his long journey to his home up North."

"He will be back here before he leaves for good, and I hope he will not catch you. Why did you come out so early? Not one of your sisters is here."

"I was tired of waiting," replied Cherry Blossom, "and so would you be if you had been shut up in the house all winter with never a chance to peek outside."

"Better go back and wait a little longer," warned Gentle Breeze as he wafted away.

But Cherry Blossom did not take the warning, for the next day the sun was warmer and out she threw her pretty skirts for everyone to admire.

But that night how sorry she was that she did not heed the warning of Gentle Breeze, for the night wind grew chilly and by and by along came North Wind for a farewell trip and he nipped little Cherry Blossom so hard that the next day when the sun came out there she was all withered.

Poor little Cherry Blossom would never be a cherry now, and when it was time for her sisters to come out in their pretty new gowns she had to wear an old brown dress and cling close to the bark of the limb where she lived.

Then later she had to see her sisters in their beautiful red dresses which she could not wear, and she had plenty of time to think over how silly she had been not to wait patiently, as they did, for the warm days to come. Instead of hurrying out ahead of them that she might have all the admiration for herself.

The next year she was wiser and stayed tucked snugly in her winter bed until it was time for all of her sisters to put on their summer clothes, and you can be certain that none of them looked prettier than the little Cherry Blossom who the summer before wore an old faded dress all the season.

Lillian Rich

Well known in England as a musical comedy star, Lillian Rich, prominent "movie" star in America, not so long ago was associated with Sir Harry Lauder. In America she has gained much fame in big features, one of which was a racing melodrama, scenes for which were taken at the track in Louisville, Ky., when the Derby was being run.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

FACTS about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

KATHERINE

LIKE Mary, the charming name of Katherine, has an almost illimitable history, and its derivations and contractions are endless. It signifies pure, since it was first borne by a maiden martyr, whose name was chosen as the center of an allegory of intellectual religion. Katherine in Greek became Catharina in the Latin tongue. Going further back, it can be found that this martyred Katherine was a virgin martyr of Alexandria, whose history is unknown. Some historians credit her with being the daughter of a king of Egypt but this contention cannot be substantiated. However it is, Katherine's purity and sanctity are unmistakable.

The martyrdom of the original Katherine is recorded in literature and art—the destruction of the wheels that were to have torn her asunder; her martyrdom by the sword, and the translation of her body by angels to Mount Sinai, at whose foot stands a convent bearing her name where she is adored perpetually, are all familiar themes to the masters of pen and brush. Passing from the sublime to the practical, the fireworks called Katherine wheels are an allusion to the instruments of torture which were destroyed by lightning and the tiny Brown bird known as the Kittywren is so-called from association as her sacred bird.

The crusaders brought home the story of Katherine's martyrdom and her name spread in fame throughout the West. The Italians had a Santa Caterina of Siena, whose influence was potent during the Middle Ages, thus adding another link to the chain of sanctity which surrounds the name of Katherine.

Another famous Katherine was the countess of Salisbury, heroine of the Garter. John of Gaunt had a daughter, who, as queen of Castille, made Caterina a favorite in Spain whence it was returned to England with Katherine of Aragon. Catherine de Valois, queen of Henry V, brought it to France. Several of the queens of the much-married Henry VIII bore the name of Katherine.

Kathleen, Kitty and Kate are games of individual charm, yet they spring from Katherine and are really only translations, diminutives and contractions of that most popular of feminine names. No name is more universal than Katherine and her various derivatives, partly from association.

The graceful Kathleen originated in Ireland, after Katherine had become established in England. It is an adaptation of the old Ossianic Cathlin, meaning the "beam of the wave" and the name given to one of the stars.

Kitty and Kate are old English names, which stand on their own merits as individual names and are frequently given in baptism. Kate is the Scotch adaptation. Catherine, belonging absolutely to England, has even produced a masculine counterpart. Catherine, Catharin Davita the famous historian, was so-called since he was unfortunate enough to have Catherine de Medici for his grandmother.

In Italy, Santa Caterina is a term of derision for an old maid. Many hills have been named after Catherine, the Votress of Siena, and Ekaterinburg was so called in honor of the Russian empress.

In France the name is Catherine, Catharina, Caton and Tripetite. In Spain, we have Catalina, Catarina, Italian, and Katherine, Katchen, Kathe and Trina, are Teutonic. Katinka is Russian, and Katrina and Kolina are Swedish. The Slovak adaptation is Katrina.

The talismanic gem assigned to Katherine and her derivatives is the moss agate, which promises a bold heart and freedom from danger to its wearer. It is an excellent amulet to be worn by travelers and signifies a journey when it is the subject of a dream. Tuesday is Katherine's lucky day and two her lucky number.

Waller's charming poem "Kitty Nell" is familiar to every one.

Sweet Kate! Who could view your bright eyes of blue Beaming humbly through their dark lashes so mild—

Your fair-turned arm, heaving breast, rounded form— Nor feel his heart warm and his pulses throb wildly?

The Right Thing at the Right Time

By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

SETTING A TABLE

The virtue in most request is conformity—Emerson

IT DOESN'T take a bit longer to set a table in a way that has been generally agreed in this country to be the most attractive and convenient way than it does in a way that indicates that you are indifferent and careless. It may not seem like a matter of vital importance whether you put the butter plate at the right side or at the left, or whether the water glass is placed just beyond the forks or the knife. And perhaps it isn't vital, but the way that has been decided upon is really most convenient. Anyway, since the water glass is usually placed at the right, at the tip of the knife, and the butter plate at the left, at the end of the fork we are used to it that way and we associate that way with the carefully set table and the well-run household. When knives and forks are crossed over the plates and the plates are turned downward on the tablecloth, the spoons kept in a spoonholder and a little dish of toothpicks is in the middle of the table, we immediately have the wrong sort of impression. We are prejudiced from the start.

Remember that it is customary to have the napkin placed at the left of the plate, although at formal dinners sometimes it is placed on the plate that is set at each place, the dinner roll being tucked between the folds of the napkin.

On some tables there is always an assemblage of condiment bottles of all sorts, catsup, horseradish, tabasco sauce and mustard, all in their original containers and these are placed on the table at every meal whether or not they are the right sort of condiment with the dishes to be served. Now as much as possible we should keep the table free from these little accessories. Serve the right condiment, preferably in a dish that shows no sign of the manufacturer's name—with boiled beef a little mustard, with corned beef a bottle of catsup or chili sauce, according to the tastes of the family.

If you have little or no service at table, then it is best to place more on the table than you would otherwise.

The bread, freshly sliced, should be set on the table before the meal is begun. If the table is long there should be two plates of bread. The glasses should be filled just before the diners are assembled and a crafe of cold water may be placed on the table to facilitate the replenishing of the glasses. This is preferable to the water pitcher. If individual salts and peppers are not provided then there should be one placed between each two places toward the center of the table.

She had waited nearly half an hour, but the library door had not been opened again. The closeness of the hall seemed choking her; she went to the front door and threw it open. The evening was clear and cool; but it was not from the chill of the air that she shivered as she gazed out at the woods through which she had driven with Hugh the night before. There the hunt for him had been going on all day; there she pictured him now, in darkness, in suffering, alone, hurt, hunted and with all the world but her against him!

She ran down the steps and stood on the lawn. The vague noises of the house now no longer were audible. She stood in the silence of the evening strained and fearfully listening. At first there seemed to be no sound outdoors other than the gentle rust of the waves on the beach at the foot of the bluff behind her; then, in the opposite direction, she defined the undertone of some far-away confusion. Sometimes it seemed to be shouting, next only a murmur of movement and noise. She ran up the road a hundred yards in its direction and halted again. The noise was nearer and clearer—a confusion of motor explosions and voices; and now one sound clattered louder and louder and leaped nearer rapidly and rose above the rest, the roar of a powerful motor-car racing with "out-out" open. The rising racket of it terrified Harriet with its recklessness and triumph. Yes; that was it; triumph! The far-off tumult was the noise of shouts and cries of triumph; the racing car, blaring its way through the night, was the bearer of news of success of the search.

Harriet went colder as she knew this; then she ran up the road to meet the car coming. She saw the glare of its headlights through the trees past a bend in the road; she ran on and the beams of the car's headlights straightened and glared down the road directly upon her. The car leaped at her; she ran on toward it, arms in the air. The clatter of the car became deafening and the machine was nearly upon her when the driver recognized that the girl in the road was heedless and might throw herself before him unless he stopped. He brought his car up short and skidding. "What is it?" he cried, as he muffled the engine.

"What is it? What is it?" she cried in return.

The man recognized her. "Miss Santoline!"

"What is it?"

"We've got him!" the man cried.

"We've got him!"

"Him?"

"Him! Hugh Overton! Eaton, Miss Santoline. He's Hugh Overton; hadn't you heard? And we've got him!"

"Got him?"

"Where is Mr. Avery?" he demanded. "I've got to tell Mr. Avery."

She made no response but threw herself in front of the car and clasped a wheel as the man started to throw in his gear. He cried to her and tried to get her off; but she was deaf to him. He looked in the direction of the house, shut off his power and leaped down. He left the machine and ran on the road toward the house. Harriet started the car and turned it back in the direction from which it had come. She speeded and soon other headlights flared at hers—a number of them; four or five cars, at least, were in file up the road and men were crowding and horsemen were riding beside them.

She rushed on so close that she saw she alarmed them; they cried a warning; the horsemen and the men on foot jumped from beside the road and the leading car swung to one side; but Harriet caught her car on the brakes and swung it straight across the road and stopped it; she closed the throttle and pulled the key from the starting mechanism and flung it into the woods. So she sat in the car, waiting for the captors of Hugh to come up.

"Where is he?" she asked them.

"Where is he?"

They did not tell her; but reply was unnecessary. Others' eyes pointed hers to Hugh. He was in the back seat of the second machine with two men, one on each side of him. She stopped at the side of the car where he was and she put her hand on the edge of the tonneau.

"You have been hurt again, Hugh?" she managed steadily.

"Hurt? No," he said as constrainedly. "No."

The car started, and she sat silent, with her hand still upon his, as they went on to her father's house.

Santoline, after Harriet had left the library, stood waiting until he heard the servant go out and close the door. "When did you learn that Eaton was Hugh Overton, Avery?" he asked.

"Today."

"How did you discover it?"

"It was plain from the first there was something wrong with the man," Avery replied; "but I had, of course, no way of placing him until he gave himself away at polo the other day. I saw that he was pretending not to know a game which he did know; when he put over one particular stroke I was sure he knew the game very well. The number of men in this country who've played polo at all isn't very large, and those who can play great polo are very few. So I sent for the polo annuals for a few years back; the ones I wanted came to the club today. His picture is in the group of the Spring Meadows club; he played 'back' for them five years ago. His name was under the picture, of course."

"I understand. I am glad to know how it was. One less certain of your fidelity than I am might have put another construction on your silence; one less certain, Avery, might have thought that, already knowing Eaton's identity, you preferred instead of telling it to me to have me discover it for myself and so, for that reason, you trapped him into a polo game in Harriet's presence."

For a moment Santoline paused; the man across from him did not speak, but—Santoline's intuition told him—drew himself together for some shock.

"Of course," said Santoline, "knowing who Eaton is gives us no aid in determining who the men were that fought in my study last night?"

"It gives none to me, Mr. Santoline," Avery said steadily.

"It gives none to you," Santoline repeated; "and the very peculiar behavior of the stock exchange today, I suppose that gives you no help either. All day they have been going down, Avery—the securities, the stocks and bonds of the properties still known as the Latron properties. Without apparent reason, they have been going down and that gives you no help either, Avery?"

"You Have Been Hurt Again, Hugh?" She Managed Steadily.

"Yet you are a very clever man; there is no question about that. I have even found it worth while at times to talk over with you matters—problems—which were troubling me; to consult with you. Have I not?"

"Yes."

"Very well; I am going to consult with you now. I have an infirmity, as you know, Avery; I am blind. I have just found out that for several years—for about five years, to be exact; that is, for about the same length of time that you have been with me—my blindness has been used by a certain group of men to make me the agent of a monstrous and terrible injustice to an innocent man. Except for my blindness—except for that, Avery, this injustice never could have been carried on. If you find a certain amount of bitterness in my tone, it is due to that; a man who has an infirmity, Avery, cannot well help being a little sensitive in regard to it. You are willing I should consult with you in regard to this?"

"Of course I am at your service, Mr. Santoline," Avery's voice was harsh and dry.

The blind man was silent for an instant. He could feel the uneasiness and anxiety of the man across from him mounting swiftly, and he gave it every opportunity to increase. He had told Eaton once that he did not use "cat and mouse" methods; he was using them now because that was the only way his purpose could be achieved.

"We must go back to the quite serious emergency to which I am indebted for your faithful service. Five years ago the American people appeared perfectly convinced that the only way to win true happiness and perpetuate prosperity was to accuse, condemn and jail for life—if execution were not legal—the heads of the important groups of industrial properties. Just at that time, one of these men—one of the most efficient but also, perhaps, the one personally most obnoxious or unpopular—committed one of his gravest indiscretions. It concerned the private use of deposits in national banks; it was a federal offense of the most patent and provable kind. He was indicted. Considering the temper of any possible jury at that time, there was absolutely no alternative but to believe the man under indictment must spend many succeeding years, if not the rest of his life, in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta or Leavenworth."

"Now, the man was in complete control of a group of the most valuable and prosperous properties in America. Before his gaining control, the properties had been almost ruined by differences between the minor men who tried to run them; only the calling of Matthew Latron into control saved those men from themselves; they required him to govern them; his taking away would bring chaos and ruin among them again. They knew that. Just before he must go to trial, Latron himself became convinced that he faced confinement for the rest of his life; then fate effectively intervened to end all his troubles. His body, charred and almost consumed by flames—but nevertheless the identified body of Matthew Latron—was found in the smoking ruins of his shooting lodge, which burned to the ground two days before his trial."

Avery was hunched in the seat watching the blind man with growing conviction and fear.

Santoline went on: "A young man was shown to have followed Latron to the shooting lodge; a witness appeared who had seen this young man shoot Latron; a second witness had seen him set fire to the lodge. The young man—Hugh Overton—was put on trial for his life. I, myself, as a witness at the trial supplied the motive for the crime; for, though I had never met Overton, I knew that he had lost the whole of a large fortune through investments recommended to him by Latron. Overton was convicted, sentenced to death; he escaped before the sentence was carried out—became a fugitive without a name, who if he ever appeared would be handed over for execution. For the evidence had been perfect—complete; he had shot Latron purely for revenge, killed him in the most despicable manner. For there was no doubt Latron was dead, was there, Avery?"

"None," Avery said huskily.

"That was the time you came into my employ, Avery, recommended to me by one of the men who had been closest to Latron. I was not connected with the Latron properties except as an adviser; but many papers relating to them must go inevitably through my hands. I was rather on the inside in all that concerned those properties. But I could not myself see the papers; I was blind; therefore I had to have others serve as eyes for me. And from the first, Avery, you served as my eyes in connection with all papers relating to the Latron properties. If anything ever appeared in those papers which might have led me to suspect that any injustice had been done, in the punishment of Latron's murderer, it could reach me only through you. Nothing of that sort ever did reach me, Avery. You must have made quite a good thing out of it."

"What?"

"I say, your position here must have been rather profitable to you, Avery; I have not treated you badly myself, recognizing that you must often be tempted by gaining information here from which you might make money; and your other employers must have overbid me."

"I don't understand; I beg your pardon, Mr. Santoline, but I do not follow what you are talking about."

"No? Then we must go a little further. This last year a minor reorganization became necessary in some of the Latron properties. My friend, Gabriel Warden—who was an honest man, Avery—had recently greatly increased his interest in those properties; it was inevitable the reorganization should be largely in his hands. During his work with the Latron properties, Warden—the honest man, Avery—discovered the terrible injustice of which I speak."

"I do not need to draw your attention, Avery, to the very peculiar condition which followed Warden's death. Warden had certainly had communication with Overton of some sort; Overton's enemies, therefore, were unable to rid themselves of him by delivering him up to the police because they did not know how much Overton knew. When I found that Warden had made me his executor and I went west and took charge of his affairs, their difficulties were intensified, for they did not dare to let suspicion of what had been done reach me. There was no course open to them, therefore, but to remove Overton before my suspicions were aroused, even if it could be done only at desperate risk to themselves."

"What I am leading up to, Avery, is your own connection with these events. You looked after your own interests rather carefully, I think, up to a certain point. When—knowing who Eaton was—you got him into a polo game, it was so that, if your interests were best served by exposing him, you could do so without revealing the real source of your knowledge of him. But an unforeseen event arose. The drafts and lists relating to the reorganization of the Latron properties—containing the very facts, no doubt, which first had aroused Warden's suspicions—were sent me through Warden's office. At first there was nothing threatening to you in this, because their contents could reach me only through you. But in the uncertainty I felt, I had my daughter take these matters out of your hands."

"That night, Avery, you sent an unsigned telegram from the office in the village, almost within twenty-four hours my study was entered, the safe inaccessible to you was broken open, the contents were carried away. Do you suppose I do not know that one of the two men in the study last night was the principal whose agents had failed in two attempts to get rid of Overton for him, whose other agent—yourself, Avery—had failed to intercept the evidence which would have revealed the truth to me, so that no longer trusting to agents, he himself had come in desperation to prevent my learning the facts? I realize fully, Avery, that by means of you my blindness and my reputation have been used for five years to conceal from the public the fact that Matthew Latron had not been murdered, but was still alive!"

Santoline heard Avery get up; he stood an instant and tried to speak, but his breath caught nervously; he made another effort.

"I didn't have anything to do with convicting Overton, or know anything about it until that part was all over; I never saw him till I saw him on the train. I didn't know Warden was going to be killed."

"But you were accessory to the robbery of my house last night and, therefore, accessory to the murder of Wallace Blatchford. Last night, too, knowing Overton was innocent of everything charged against him, you gave orders to fire upon him at sight and he was fired upon. And what were you telling Harriet when I came in? You have told the police that Overton is the murderer of Latron. Isn't that so the police will refuse to believe anything he may say and return him to the death cell for the sentence to be executed upon him? The law will call these things attempted murder, Avery."

The blind man heard Avery pacing the floor, and then heard him stop in front of him.

"What is it you want to know, sir?"

"Who killed Warden?"

"John Yarrow is his name; he was a sort of hanger-on of Latron's. I don't know where Latron picked him up."

"Was it he who also made the attack on the train?"

"Yes."

"Who was the other man on the train—the one that claimed the telegram addressed to Lawrence Hillward?"

"His name's Hollock. He's titular owner of the place on the Michigan shore where Latron has been living. The telegram I sent night before last was addressed to his place, you know. He's been a sort of go-between for Latron and the men—those who knew—who were managing the properties. I'd never met him, though, Mr. Santoline, and I didn't know either him or Hollock, on the train. As I said, I wasn't in the know about killing Warden."

"When did you learn who Eaton was, Avery?"

"The day after we got back here from the West I got word from Latron; they didn't tell me till they needed to use me." Avery hesitated; then he went on: "You understand, sir, about Latron's pretended death—a guide at the shooting lodge had been killed by a chance shot in the woods; purely accidental; some one of the party had fired at a deer, missed, and never knew he'd killed a man with the waste shot. When the guide didn't come back to camp, they looked for him and found his body. He was a man who never would be missed or inquired for and was very nearly Latron's size; and that gave Latron the idea."

"At first there was no idea of pretending he had been murdered; it was the coroner who first suggested that. Things looked ugly for a while, under the circumstances, as they were made public. Either the scheme might come out or someone else be charged as the murderer. That put it up to Overton. He'd actually been up there to see Latron and had had a scene with him which had been witnessed. That part—all but the evidence which showed that he shot Latron afterward—was perfectly true. He thought that Latron, as he was about to go to trial, might be willing to give him information which would let him save something from the fortune he'd lost through Latron's manipulations. The circumstances, motive, everything was ready to convict Overton; it needed very little more to complete the case against him."

"So it was completed."

"But after Overton was convicted, he was not allowed to be punished, sir."

Santoline's lips straightened in contempt. "He was not allowed to be punished?"

"Overton didn't actually escape, you know, Mr. Santoline—that is, he couldn't have escaped without help; Latron was thoroughly frightened and he wanted it carried through and Overton executed; but some of the others rebelled against this and saw that Overton got away; but he never knew he'd been helped. I understand it was evidence of Latron's insistence on the sentence being carried out that Warden found, after his first suspicions had been aroused, and that put Warden in a position to have Latron tried for his life, and made it necessary to kill Warden."

"Latron is dead, of course, Avery, or fatally wounded?"

"He's dead. Over—Eaton, that is, sir—hit him last night with three shots."

"As a housebreaker engaged in rifling my safe, Avery?"

"Yes, sir. Latron was dying when they took him out of the car last night. They got him away, though; put him on the boat he'd come on. I saw them in the woods last night. They'll not destroy the body or make away with it, sir, at present."

"Well, she's very alry about her diction, to say the least."

Shoes in Colors Match the Dress

Various Tones Used Singly and in Combination With Others.

Almond Green Is One of the Favored Colors

Bootmakers are among the most versatile people in the world. Even the dressmaker of today, notes a Paris fashion writer in the New York Tribune, is scarcely able to keep pace with the modern shoemaker in clever ideas. There apparently is no end to the original things that he can do.

The colors seen in shoes naturally follow those in dresses. All the gray and brown tones are used singly and in combination with one another. The grays range from the shade known as silver gray to smoke color, and the browns from fawn to the darker cocoa shades. Otter is particularly popular at the present time.

In the novelty class are shoes made of bright-colored kid. It has been some time since slippers of colored kid were worn to any extent. All the greens, reds and browns seen in dresses are reflected in the newest footwear of this sort. Not every woman will have the courage to appear in shoes of bright green or red, but the dark blue and bottle green shades will no doubt become popular, even with the more conservative woman. Colored kid is used for trimmings, such as tongues, inserted strips and heels, as well as for entire shoes.

To start an epidemic of color in clothes is like upsetting hundreds of dye pots. Even as far-reaching as shoes is the influence of bright-colored prints, which show no sign of waning.

At the recent International Silk exposition representatives of the exclusive shoe shops of America were to be found mingling in the booths searching for printed materials from which to make shoes for the coming summer.

Cut-steel shoe ornaments are having a tremendous vogue in Paris at the present time. So great is the demand for these that manufacturers are charging as high as 250 francs for a pair of shoe buckles, and the retail price is often double this.

Almond green, one of the most winning colors in the limelight for the spring season, is used in this "three-storied" French frock of watered silk of unique and charming cut.

These ornaments are in oval and in closed designs. They are so large that they exaggerate the size of the foot, especially since they are placed directly on the instep of the high-tongue or garter style of shoe.

A season of great extravagance in all forms of shoe buckles and tongue ornaments made of cut steel, rhinestones and bronze is upon us. This probably sounds the knell of the strap slipper of sandal type. If the strap remains, the chic of the shoe must lie in a buckle or similar ornament. Gold tassels or pendant ornaments studded with brilliants are seen on the newest evening slippers.

One-Piece Dresses in Gay, Peasant Coloring

Little one-piece dresses for children are made with embroidery at the top of the hem, around the neck and where the frock opens in front, over the shoulders and around the sleeves in gay, peasant coloring. The materials used are light colored linens. Some dresses are embroidered with round or oblong medallion designs, and when the linen is white heavy linen lace is scantily quilted around the medallions.

Fudge aprons, tea aprons and fancy work aprons all come in for their share of embroidery, and some of them are very original and attractive. One in old blue linen had oblong, embroidered motifs in white and gay colors, and around each motif a little crocheted linen lace was quilted, which gave a very foreign effect to the work.

Summer Mode.

A gown which, owing to its present popularity, will be repeated during the summer months, is the long bodiced organdie frock with the full skirt trimmed in bands of wide velvet ribbon of a shade darker than the organdie. Ribbon forms the tiny sleeves and outlines the rounded neck. In grayish blue this gown would be most attractive for summer afternoon affairs.

Dinner Dress Import Is of Crepe Romaine

This artistic dinner dress of apricot crepe romaine, with a broad silver stripe and banded with platinum fox, shows a smartly draped cape of the same material, to be worn, if desired, with the gown.

The Corded and Satin Faced Silks for Fall

Silk ideas for fall are still in a formative stage, but two types of abric stand out—the corded weaves and the satin-faced constructions like satin canton. Alpaca, one of the new notes this year in Paris, is frowned upon by the American silk trade, although a recent Paris communication stated that the French had metamorphosed the old alpaca into "something supple and becomingly springy."

The tendency noted toward shiny fabrics in the spring collections is finding its reflection in this country, and is a much stronger note at the moment than the corded idea referred to above, which is chiefly a fall proposition. The use of satin canton is presumably a matter of expediency, rather than a following of any style dictum. Manufacturers, after using a great deal of satin canton, with the dull side out, more than a year ago, then swung around to flat crepe, which for a while was the dominant dress material. Some houses, finding this an unsatisfactory medium to work with, cast about for a substitute other than the overworked canton crepe, and hit upon satin canton again.

The dull side is used more freely than the lustrous surface for all-silk dresses, and many silk manufacturers have marveled at the purchase of satin-faced materials to use wrong side out, but as a matter of fact, the construction makes a particularly lovely drape, regardless of which side is used. The satin, moreover, serves as trimming.

These heavier crepe materials are seen more than the lightweight clothes, but a few sports dresses are made of meteor. The recent call for luster materials leads silk manufacturers to expect the demand to carry over into fall and to assume larger proportions.

Fur Coats Are to Be Slimmer Next Season

Fur coats will be slim next year, if we are to believe what designers say. This season's coats and capes have been rather voluminous, falling in full lines from shoulder to hem. The present French styles, however, are far more slender in silhouette than ours and we will undoubtedly be following their lines next season.

Already importers are showing advance models based upon French imports with long, slender lines. It is presumed that the long skirt vogue will continue throughout the coming year, hence advance models all concentrate on the 51-inch length, with a decided tendency toward the narrow ankle line. In some cases the ankle line is so scant that inside straps and under linings are provided to make walking more comfortable.

Coats and dolmans are gaining over the cape for daytime wear. The cape with the side slits for the arms will probably remain staple for evening wear.

Dainty Handkerchiefs.

The vogue for colored handkerchiefs was said to be dying out six months ago, but they are as plentifully seen as ever. Blue, green, apricot and orchid are among the popular shades; also tan and gray.

HAMPTON ITEMS

Mrs. Mary Blair, of Philadelphia, who was formerly Miss Mary Fissell of Hampton, recently broke one of her legs in a fall. At latest reports she was improving.

While Chester Chronister's were returning from Gettysburg Saturday a week they ran into a pile of posts and bent the bumper and fenders and broke the windshield of their car. Fortunately no one was hurt.

Walter Phillips and family, Round Hill, attended the funeral of Mrs. P's father at Wolf's church, Sunday afternoon.

In taking Mrs. Earle W. Gardner from Hampton to the sanatorium, Edde Kroll, driver, made a record run with the city ambulance. He estimates the distance as 22 miles each way, a total of 44 miles, and made the round trip in 56 minutes.

Mrs. Thomas B. Monk, of York, formerly of Hampton, was elected chairman for the tenth anniversary of the Penn-Hall, Chambersburg.

It is reported that a man from the vicinity of Hanover was out hunting Wednesday, having previously seen a ground hog close to Dicks Dam. He started to investigate and when he had his game in sight of his trusty rifle he pulled the trigger. As he went to capture the prize he discovered that he had shot and killed a pig belonging to a nearby farmer. It is understood that the matter was later amicably adjusted to the satisfaction of all parties concerned.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Arendt, York, formerly of Waldheim and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Arendt, West York, left on Monday for Chambersburg on a visit to their daughter, Beulah, before starting on a motoring trip to the former's daughter, Mrs. Edward Hamme, in North Dakota. They expect to remain about five weeks.

The Children's Day exercises in the Lutheran church on Sunday evening were largely attended and the program was excellent. The drills were impressive and well rendered, especially the last one entitled, "The Coming of Summer Time", by 17 young ladies representing the four seasons of the year. The pastor, the Rev. Little, gave a short address in which he stated that the offering of the evening was for the Loyal Orphans Home. He also commended the boys and girls for the excellent manner in which they gave their parts of the program. The offering was $12.

A very enjoyable birthday surprise party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Yingst, Pleasant View, Saturday evening in honor of their grand daughter Miss Iva's birthday. She received very pretty and useful gifts for which she wishes to thank the many friends and neighbors. Games were played and delicious refreshments were served to 107 people from Stevens City, Va.; Baltimore, Myerstown, Dillsburg, York Springs, Hampton, Victory, Bernadine and other nearby places. COUNTY'S INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTS

WERE VALUED AT $7,577,700 IN 1922
Industrial products in Adams county in 1922 had a value of $7,577,700, or approximately 5 percent, less than the value of industrial production in 1921, according to figures made public by Secretary of Internal Affairs. In the county last year there were 117 industrial establishments giving employment to 2,855 persons of whom 2,833 were Americans white, 17 Americans colored and 5 were foreigners. There were 1,844 male and 1,011 female employees. These wage earners were paid a total last year of $1,687,700, of which $1,305,300 was paid to male workers and $382,400 was paid to female employees. The capital invested in the industrial establishments in the county amounted to $4,184,800.

Of the total value of industrial products in Adams county last year, products worth $4,817,800 were shipped to points outside of Pennsylvania for sale and distribution.

Lumber and its manufacture, proved to be the leading industry in the county last year, products under this class of industry having a value of $1,912,800, of which amount furniture represented $1,722,700. Food and kindred products had a value of $1,377,900, while textiles and textile products had a value of $1,184,400. Food and kindred products increased 7.2 percent over 1921; lumber and its manufacture increased 1.5 percent; textiles increased 45.8 percent; while tobacco and its products showed a decrease of 16 percent.

Other industrial classes in the county last year had these values:

Building and contracting, $137,200, a decrease of 86.5 percent; clay, glass and stone products, $445,200, an increase of 4.9 percent; leather and rubber goods, $604,500, a decrease of 6.9 percent; paper and printing industries, $86,000, a decrease of 3.3 percent; metals and metal products, $215,200, an increase of 47.8 percent; mines and quarries, $212,900, an increase of 82.7 percent.

The falling off in the grand total for 1922 was due primarily to the decreased road building operations in the county last year. In practically all of the industrial classes, Adams county enjoyed a healthy growth.

Some of the quantities produced in Adams county last year included:

2,707 tons of fertilizers; 7,686,500 building bricks; 3,000 pounds of confectionery; 39,073 gallons of ice cream; 4,502 tons of manufactured ice; 154,885 gallons of vinegar; 325,261 pairs of shoes; 935,586 cigar boxes; 68,659 dozen shirts; 3,750 tons of sand and gravel; 23,877,510 cigars.

Some individual products in the county and increases last year over 1921 follow:

Building construction, $59,860, an increase of 8.7 percent; marble and granite, $13,500, an increase of 35 percent; terra cotta and fire clay products, $132,800, an increase of 64 percent; canned and preserved goods, $725,100, an increase of 13 percent; silk and silk goods, $1,009,600, an increase of 175.9 percent; iron castings, $81,700, an increase of 104.3 percent; crushed stone, $66,000, an increase of 245.5 percent.

Recommends Chamberlain's Tablets.
—"Chamberlain's Tablets have been used by my husband and myself off and on for the past five years. When my husband goes away from home he always takes a bottle of them along with him. Whenever I have that heavy feeling after eating, or feel dull and played out, I take one or two of Chamberlain's Tablets and they fix me up fine," writes Mrs. Newton Vreeland, Minoa, N. Y. Take these tablets when troubled with constipation or indigestion and they will do you good.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Drink Water to Help Wash Out Kidney Poison

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your wheels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then get fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent thirst-water drink, which everyone would take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try it; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

COAL IS SCARCER—IT WILL BE TO YOUR ADVANTAGE TO INVESTIGATE AT ONCE

OXO-GAS burners for All Purposes. NO SMOKE, ASHES OR SOOT. POSITIVELY NOISELESS.

The most efficient and economical method of producing heat from coal consists of extracting a gas from coal and burning the gas, but only about 35% of heat units are used in this way. In the ordinary stove only about 28% of the heat is utilized. OXO-GAS produced from common coal oil (kerosene), particularly when mixed with 96% of atmospheric air (oxygen), is the utilization of every heat unit of fuel.

BREACH OF PROMISE ACTION

Miss Hilda A. Tipton, 19 years old, Gettysburg, in a breach of promise suit filed in the court of common pleas, Wednesday, avers that William D. Wachter, 23, Gettysburg, refused and "still refuses to marry her." For this alleged breach of promise, the sum of $2,500 is asked in the plaintiff's statement of claim. The breach of promise suit, instituted by Miss Tipton's mother, Mrs. Jennie Tipton, her nearest relative, is the first of its kind in the local courts for 15 years, according to court house officials. The case will not come to trial before November 12, the date for the next regular term of the common pleas division. Wachter, an employee at the Reaser Furniture Factory, was arrested Wednesday by Deputy Sheriff Hartman on a special capias warrant, in which bail was fixed by Judge McPherson at $500. A. S. Mills, Gettysburg, went on Wachter's bond.

Miss Tipton avers in her bill of complaint that she became acquainted with Wachter, the defendant, in 1920 and that after an extended courtship, they became engaged on or about January 21, 1923. Consent of Mrs. Tipton to the marriage having been secured, she asserts, the date for the nuptials was set for June 1 in the U. B. church, in Gettysburg. Miss Tipton further alleges that confiding in the promise of marriage made to her by the defendant, she secured her trousseau and much of the household linen, and that Wachter also presented her with some valuable engagement presents. She further declares that the conduct of Wachter was without just cause or reason, and that she has remained sole and unmarried and has always been ready and willing to marry the defendant as she agreed to do.

Miss Bessie M. Wachter, sister of the defendant, denies William gave Miss Tipton any valuable engagement presents. Miss Wachter says, "The truth is they quarreled on Palm Sunday evening, a quarrel which had been smoldering for several weeks and reached its climax on that evening. Does any girl ever have the most of her trousseau ready two months before her wedding?"

A SAFE TEST

For those who are in need of a remedy for kidney troubles and backache, it is a good plan to try Dotn's Kidney Pills. They are strongly recommended by people in this vicinity.

Robert J. Cook, 245 N. Stratton St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "My kidneys got out of fix. I felt mighty lame in the small of my back mornings and when I tried to bend sharp, stinging pains ran through my back. When I went to lift anything a pain cut me in my back which felt as if it were pulling me down. My kidneys seemed congested and were inactive. Doan's Pills had been used in my family so I got some. They went right to the trouble and fixed me up and put my kidneys in good condition again."

The case brought against Harry J. Mueller, Abbottstown, at Trenton, N. J., in which he was charged with the embezzlement of stocks and bonds, has been squashed by the prosecuting attorney at Trenton, Mr. Mueller says. Mr. Mueller explains that the stocks and bonds in question were left by him with the office of the firm of which he had been manager for resale and that the certificates were never sold but are still on record at the home office of the company. The man who brought suit, it appears, is a foreigner and did not understand the transaction. Mr. Mueller has returned to his home freed from the charge.

The following East Berlin pupils were present every day during the school year of 1927 and 1928: Kathryn Kunkle, Irene Fitzkee, of the High School, Faye Darone, Ruth Baker, of the Grammar School, Emory Myers and Kathryn McIntire, of the Secondary School, Eugene Chionister, Lewis and Luther Jacobs, of Primary room.

Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy.—Every family should keep this preparation at hand during the hot of the summer months. It is almost sure to be needed, and when that time comes, is worth many times its cost. Buy it now.

The following officers were elected and installed for the coming year at the annual convention of the 3rd District S. S. Assn. held Sunday aweek at St. Luke's U. church, installation being in charge of the County President, M. E. Knouse; Pres. Harry Baker; V. P., Wm. B. Harnberger; Sec., John H. Shue; Treas., I. S. Brumgard; O. A. B. C., Isaiah Lohr; Teacher Training, J. G. Casner; Home Dept., C. F. Helt; Young Peoples Div., Mervin Miller; Missionary, Margaret Mehning; Temp., Mary Crouse; Children's Div., A. Nevin Sponseller; Administrative, Rev. S. W. Beck. Delegates were present from 14 of the 15 schools in the district. The theme of the convention was "Upward." Due to the absence of president, J. G. Casner presided. Inspiring addresses were given by Dr. C. F. Sanders, of Gettysburg college, and the Rev. E. M. Sando, of Hanover.

Why Suffer from Rheumatism?—Do you know that nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment? The pain may be relieved by applying Chamberlain's Liniment, which makes sleep and rest possible, and that certainly means a big deal to any one afflicted with rheumatism.

Jerry Guise, of Huntington township, recently accompanied a party of York friends to Bower's Beach on the Delaware Bay and while out fishing an 8-foot shark came along. Jerry says that he could have nicked the shark's back bone with a bullet and brought the big fish along home. The party of five men caught 226 trout and croakers.

THROWN FROM AUTO IN HAMPTON

Mrs. Earle W. Gardner, York, was painfully injured late Saturday afternoon when she was thrown from an automobile being driven by her husband. She is a patient at the West Side sanatorium, where she was taken in the York City ambulance following the accident, which occurred about 5:30 o'clock in Hampton.
She sustained a superficial cut above the right eye, a cut on the right side of the face, and a bruised right chest.
Mrs. Gardner also suffered from shock and is resting as comfortably as can be expected. An X-ray examination was made Monday and showed a possible fracture of two ribs.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner and their daughter, Jean, in the Daniels motor car, owned by the Gardners and driven by Mr. Gardner, who is connected with the York Manufacturing company, were bound for Mechanicsburg, where they expected to spend Sunday with his father, Eugene Gardner. In front of Hayden Detrick's in Hampton, the automobile skidded and ran onto some loose stones where it wobbled about for a bit, and finally the rear end sideswiped a tree. The car kept going for a distance of about twenty feet. In the jolt against the tree, Mrs. Gardner was thrown from the automobile, it was discovered, when the car was brought to a stop.
Word was sent to York for assistance and the injured woman was removed to the West Side sanatorium. The automobile was slightly damaged.

William L. Hoffheins, son of Mrs.
W. L. Hoffheins, Hanover, received a diploma at the commencement exercises of the United States Naval academy, Annapolis, Thursday morning.
There were about 400 graduated in the class of 1923. Commissioned as an officer in the naval service of the country, Ensign Hoffheins has been assigned to the U. S. S. North Dakota.
Midshipman Hoffheins is the son of the late principal of the Hanover High school. He was graduated from that school in the class of 1919 and was appointed to the Naval academy by Congressman A. R. Brodbeck, in November, 1918, and entered the academy the following summer. His vessel will be away on the midshipmen's summer cruise until August 28, and the new officer will not report to the vessel until that time. After a month's leave of absence he will go to Washington for post-graduate work.

At a meeting of the Board of directors of Paradise township, the following teachers were elected: Harbold's, Charles Mummert; Church, C.
R. Shelly; Miller's, Elwood Murphy;
Eisenhart's, Earl Baker; Gable's,
Kathleen Serff; Stover's, Norman
Moul; Bismount, Kurvin Henry.

Miss Beulah E. Wentz, who was re-elected teacher of the Abbottstown grammar school, has not accepted the position, having been elected a teacher in the Little schools.

Louise, 9-year-old daughter of Mr.
and Mrs. Elmer Duttera, at edge of Littlestown, fell while playing and broke her arm.

The Home of the Soul.—In olden times, it was believed that the seat of the soul was the stomach, most likely for the reason that a man is never so completely used up as when his stomach is out of order. For the cure of ordinary stomach troubles, there is nothing quite so prompt and satisfactory as Chamberlain's Tablets. They strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally.
Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter.

TRY SULPHUR ON AN ECZEMA SKIN

Costs Little and Overcomes Trouble Almost Over Night

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.
It seldom fails to relieve the torment without delay. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowles' Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

KILLS CHILDREN; CUTS OWN THROAT

Deranged Woman Uses Her Husband's Razor in Attack on Two Youngsters.

CALLED ONE BY ONE

New York.—For weeks Pompeo Mastrelli of 2319 Cambrelling avenue, the Bronx, has feared for his wife's mentality. Hours at a time, he said, she would sit moodily in her chair, staring at the floor without speaking. The other afternoon, while he was at work, she killed her two young children by cutting their throats with a razor, then turned on the gas in the kitchen and cut her own throat. Physicians said there was little hope for her life.

It was the fumes of escaping gas which revealed the tragedy some time later. They finally permeated the entire building and the 16 families, becoming anxious, notified Giuseppe Fencochiaro, the landlord, who lives in the house. He traced the source of the gas to the Mastrelli apartment, but, finding the door locked, went to the street and summoned Patrolman Young, who broke down the door.

Breathes by Silver Tube.
Mrs. Mastrelli was still alive, although her jugular vein was severed. At the hospital her life has been prolonged by the insertion of a silver tube in her throat to facilitate her breathing. She is charged by the police with homicide.

Some two hours before the discovery of the tragedy, neighbors told the police, the two children, Castano, four years old, and Amelia, two years old, were seen in front of their home, eating cake which their mother had baked for them. Then they heard Mrs. Mastrelli call them into the apartment.

Summoned One by One.
Police believe that a few moments afterward Mrs. Mastrelli summoned Castano to her in the kitchen and greeted him with his father's razor. She hid his body from sight, it is thought, and killed the little girl in the same manner. She then placed them side by side in the bed in her bedroom, returned to the kitchen, turned on the gas and cut her own throat. She was found lying on the floor there with three jets of the gas range opened wide. The razor was found lying beside her.

Her husband, Pompeo, who is a slattern, returned from his work at six o'clock and told the police he believed his wife's act was the result of a deranged mind. He then told them of the moody spells recently. He declared, according to the police, that Mrs. Mastrelli's father had died in an insane asylum in Italy several months ago and that her sister had attempted at one time to commit suicide.

CONSCIENCE FLOGGED; SEEKS JAIL FOR PEACE

Man Confessing Pay Roll Juggling Demands Admission to Tombs, New York.

New York.—It was a surprised gatekeeper that peered through the iron bars of the Tombs prison recently when a big, clean-looking man knocked peremptorily for admittance.

"G'wan away," said the gatekeeper, "this is a prison; you can't get in here."

"But I want to give myself up, I tell you," pleaded the man. "I'm George Smith and I've stolen money."

"Nothin' doin'," said the gatekeeper flatly, and turned to go away.

Then Smith asked to be taken to a detective, so he could ease his conscience, which had tortured him since he began padding the pay roll of the Interborough Rapid Transit company, stealing, he said, between $300 and $400.

"Well," hesitated the gatekeeper. "If you're really telling the truth about stealin' some jack, I'll let you in."

The gate opened to let Smith in. He's still in and he can't get out. To a detective he said he lived at 55 East One Hundred and Twenty-second street.

He worked, he said, talking rapidly, in the shops at One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street and Third avenue. He earned $36 a week, taking care of the overtime pay rolls. About six months ago a man showed him how to pad the pay roll, and after holding out some time, he said he went into the scheme, splitting the profits with others.

"But the minute I got the first dollar I began worrying," said Smith. "It sounds funny, but I couldn't eat for thinking about that money and then I got so I couldn't sleep. I decided to quit the scheme and keep the pay roll on the square, but they wouldn't let me. They said they'd give me away and be witnesses. For three days I haven't slept or eaten."

When Superintendent Smith of the shop made a formal charge of grand larceny George Smith sighed in relief and said:

"Thank God, I've got that off my mind. For the first time since I got into this thing I feel like a white man, like life is worth living."

He was held in $1,000 bail in Harlem court.

TWO LOSE LIVES FOR KITTEN

Boys Climb Railroad Trestle to Rescue Pet and Are Run Down by Train.

New York.—Climbing on a railroad trestle to rescue a kitten, two boys were unable to escape when the Buffalo express of the Lackawanna railroad ran them down at Clifton, N. J., and were killed.

Walter Van Beveren, nine, Clifton, held the headless body of the kitten clutched in his hand when his body was found. The other boy killed was Fred East, eight, of Passaic, N. J.

The east-bound Buffalo express, traveling at forty miles an hour, had just rounded the curve to approach the trestle when the engineer, Frank Franklaker of Stanton, Pa., saw the boys 500 feet ahead in the middle of the bridge. The whistle screamed a warning and the engineer shut off steam and set the brakes in a vain effort to stop the train.

Mrs. Robinson Tells How She Found Relief by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Amarillo, Texas.—"My back was my greatest trouble. It would ache so that it would almost kill me and I would have cramps. I suffered in this way about three years; then a lady friend suggested that I try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have had better health since, keep house and am able to do my work. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends as it has certainly given me great relief."—Mrs. C. E. Robinson, 608 N. Lincoln St., Amarillo, Tex.

The Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for women. It relieves the troubles which cause such symptoms as backache, painful times, irregularity, tired and worn-out feelings and nervousness. This is shown again and again by such letters as Mrs. Robinson writes as well as by one woman telling another. These women know what it did for them. It is surely worth your trial.

LESSON FOR JUNE 17

ESTHER, THE PATRIOT QUEEN

LESSON TEXT—Esther 4:13-5:3
GOLDEN TEXT—"Who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?"—Esther 4:14.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Esther, the Brave Queen.
JUNIOR TOPIC—What Esther Did for Her People.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Esther's Heroism.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Study of Patriotism.

1. Esther Made Queen (Chapters 1, 2).

This drama took place in the Persian court, where Ahasuerus (Xerxes) sat upon his throne, surrounded by his princes and servants. Six months of festivity were drawing to a close, arranged by the king in order to impress upon the people of his mighty empire the fact of his greatness. The last days of this feast were marked with drunken debauchery. In a drunken frenzy the king commanded Vashti to come before the people to display her beauty. Vashti showed her independence by refusing to obey. She was instantly deposed. In providing a queen to take her place, the most beautiful maidens in the empire were brought together from whom the king might make a selection. The choice fell upon Esther, a maid of the Jewish captivity. The king did not know that she was a Jewess, but God knew, and He put her there for a purpose.

II. Haman's Plot Against the Jews (Chapter 3).

1. The Occasion of (vv. 1-6) For some reason Haman was given chief place over the princes. Though all bowed before him, Mordecai, Esther's cousin, stoutly refused to do so.

2. His Nature (vv. 7-15). Haman desired to lay hands upon Mordecai for his insubordination, but hesitated. Instead of such drastic action he laid a plot to destroy all the Jews, and there by take vengeance on Mordecai, who he learned was a Jew. He made the king believe that the Jews were an unprofitable people and induced him to order their annihilation, promising to bring into the royal treasury an enormous sum of money.

III. Haman's Plot Foiled (4:1-8:14)

1. Fasting Among the Jews (4:1-3) When Mordecai and his people perceived all that was done they put on sackcloth and ashes and cried to God.

2. Mordecai's Charge to Esther (4:4-14). He sent to Esther a copy of the decree and charged her to go before the king and make supplication for her people. Esther pointed out the difficulties in the way. "Possible death awaited her should her uninvited presence not meet the approval of the king."

3. Esther's Daring Adventure (4:16-5:2). Mordecai pointed out to her that her own life was endangered. She might meet death by venturing into the king's presence. She would surely meet death were Haman's plot not foiled. When thus brought face to face with duty, the heroism which so frequently has characterized her race moved her to undertake the hazardous task and prayerfully carry it out.

After three days of fasting and prayer she put on her royal apparel and stood in the king's court, winning his approval.

4. Esther Pleading for Her People (5:3-7:6). Esther knew that an easy way to the heart of the king was through his stomach, so she invited him and Haman to a banquet. She proposed a second banquet, at which she planned to make her request known. During the interval some strange things took place. A gallows was built upon which to hang Mordecai, at the heartless suggestion of Haman's wife. And the king, during a sleepless night, was moved to search the court records, where he found that Mordecai had not been rewarded for saving his life. So, in order to express his appreciation for this act of heroism on the part of Mordecai, he gave orders obliging Haman to do honor to the one he was preparing to hang. At the second banquet Esther pointed out Haman's wicked plot to kill the Jews and asked of the king that her people be saved. In his wrath the king ordered Haman hanged on the gallows which had been prepared for Mordecai.

5. The Counter Decree Issued (8:5-14). The original decree could not be reversed, so a counter decree was issued which enabled the Jews to defend themselves. This was dispatched to the farthest parts of the kingdom. At the appointed time there was great slaughter and the Jews were saved. God granted relief and the Feast of Purim was instituted as a memorial of their deliverance.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

MISS HAM'S VERSES

"Grunt, grunt, squeal, squeal," said Miss Ham. "There are such nice words that rhyme with pig that I do believe I shall think up some verses and then, when I have thought them up, I will recite them to you all."

"Grunt, grunt, squeal, squeal," laughed Porky Pig. "You say that as though it would be a treat for us to listen to them."

"And so it will be," said Miss Ham. "It will be a great treat, grunt grunt." "You'd better make up your verses first," said Porky Pig. "You can't tell how they might turn out. That is my advice to you."

"Of course I didn't ask your advice," said Miss Ham.

"But I'm giving it to you free," said Pinky Pig. "That shows my fine, generous nature."

"Oh, does it, indeed?" squealed Miss Ham. "Creatures who never give anything free except advice I haven't so much use for, and this is the first time I have ever known you to give anything free."

"Well, it is just as well to make a beginning," said Pinky Pig. "I begin by giving free advice—I can't tell what I may end up in giving."

"I can guess, though," said Porky Pig.

"I can guess, too," said Sammy Sausage.

"So can I, squeal, squeal," said Sir Percival Pork.

"And I can guess, grunt, grunt," said Sir Benjamin Bacon.

"I can guess and my guess will be right," said Brother Bacon.

"I am sure I can guess, if my child takes after me," said Pinky Pig's mother.

"So can I," said Mrs. Pink Pig.

"And so can I, squeal, squeal," said Mrs. Pinky Pig.

"Well, instead of all talking about being able to guess what I may end up in giving—guess, then!" squealed Pinky Pig.

And all the pigs grunted and squealed, "You'll end up by not giving anything more than the advice you start off giving."

And Pinky Pig grunted and twisted his tail, but he had nothing to say for he knew that this was the truth.

"You're all talking so much and you're not giving me the chance to recite my verses," said Miss Ham.

"But you said you were going to think them up first," said Porky Pig.

"So I did, but it doesn't take me forever to think up verses," said Miss Ham.

"Gracious," said Porky, "do you mean to tell me you have thought up more than one already?"

"Most certainly," said Miss Bacon.

"Well, did I ever," said Porky Pig.

"You'd better recite them," said Pinky Pig, "and then, as I said, we'll be able to tell and you'll be able to tell how they've turned out. Just because there are a lot of words which rhyme with pig doesn't mean that your verses will be beautiful. There are words which rhyme with love and many a poet has used them, but it all depends upon the poet or the verse writer what sort of verses they become."

"Let her recite them," said Porky Pig.

So Miss Bacon twisted her tail and recited:

It's old, old news to hear that a pig. In the good old mud just loves to dig. But old news is good news, in this case at least.

For there's nothing such fun as a mud-digging feast.

"Fair," said Pinky Pig. "Only fair. And not particularly true, for there are lots of things more fun than mud-digging. Eating, for example."

"Give her a little poetic freedom," said Porky Pig. "In poetry she's not supposed to be too exact. Pray continue," Porky added.

I love to grunt and I love to squeal. But most of all I love to feel That the farmer soon will come to feed Those who revel in their greed.

"Better," said Pinky Pig. "Slightly better."

And then Miss Ham recited her last one:

There are those who say that love is sweet. There are those who say it is a treat. An old, old friend again to meet. But I say it's sweet to eat!

And the pigs thought this was the best of all.

Chinch Bug Pest.

The mild weather has favored the successful overwintering of the chinch bug, according to reports received by the United States Department of Agriculture. It is now found to be present in winter quarters in threatening numbers over the greater part of southern and central Illinois, in 65 counties; in southern Nebraska, from Jefferson county west at least to Furnas county, and in the northeastern corner of the state in Boyd county, where it is a southward extension of a serious manifestation in southeastern South Dakota; in eastern Kansas it seems to be more abundant than during average years. The temperatures have been above normal and very dry. Burning of hibernating quarters is being practiced throughout the state of Kansas.

Trouble never fails to come to the man who waits for something to turn up.

ESSENTIAL in all building—

EVEN in the average reinforced, all-concrete building the cost of the cement used is only 6% of the total cost.

Yet Portland Cement is lower in price than any other manufactured product.

Your building material dealer can advise you where it is best to use cement, and where to use other materials. His experience should be utilized in your plans and you can rely on his judgment in the selection of the best brand in any building material line.

GENIUS OF THE SIGN BOARD

After All, What is the Small Matter of an Apostrophe "Between Friends"?

Some years ago I watched a sign-painting genius while he put the final touches on a masterpiece: "Ladies and Gent's Restaurant."

"Pardon my inquisitiveness," said I, "but why do you put the apostrophe before the s?"

"The which before the what?" he questioned courteously.

"The little curly-tailed mark after that e and that t. Some call it an apostrophe."

"Posserphe, is it? Well, young feller, I seen and I make that dingus a hundred times, and I never knew that it had a name. Posserphe! That's a good one; I'll have to spring it on the gang. Some painters always paint it after the s, but I always put it before the s, because I think that it looks more artistic there. Otherwise, it don't make no difference where you put it."—De Laval Monthly.

Pepys Born 280 Years Ago.

Samuel Pepys, writer of the famous diary, was born 280 years ago.

To stop a wagging tongue, stop your ears.

Too Late to Recall It.

Blake was talking with his friend Scribbler, the well-known English journalist of Fleet street.

"Do you believe in writing anonymously?" he asked the hero of the pen.

Scribbler looked to see that the door of his study was shut ere he replied in a confidential whisper:

"Well, I've often wished that one of my productions had been anonymous."

"What was that?" asked Blake.

"A letter proposing to Mrs. Scribbler," groaned the famous writer.—London Answers.

The Fishing Hog.

I have my loves and my hates. No words can record my aversion for the person (is he man or devil?) who snares the little fish under size, whose abortive selfishness leads him to continue when the creel is full, and who catches the mother at spawning time. To me he is the human wolverine, the fish glutton; and for him I have loathing as well as hate.—From "Old Black Bass," by Albert Benjamin Cunningham.

A woman always selects a good listener when she wants an entertaining companion.

It's now up to some genius to inaugurate a correspondence course in lawn mowing.

No "kick-back" in this mealtime cup

WHEN you find that coffee makes you nervous, keeps you awake at night, or causes frequent headaches, it's time to change to Postum.

This delicious, healthful cereal beverage gives you all the comfort and satisfaction of your usual morning cup. It has charm without harm to nerves or digestion—cheer without fear of a dangerous "kick-back."

Postum FOR HEALTH

"There's a Reason"

Made by Postum Cereal Company, Inc., Battle Creek, Mich.

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either is about one-half cent a cup.

BAIRD AND BOLL GET MAXIMUM

"Out of that bank which you were bound in honor to protect, you have left nothing whatever, but an empty shell; no surplus, no assets, nothing to meet the demands of these people who entrusted their property to your hands." Thus spoke Judge Wanner Monday in passing sentence on Thomas B. Baird, former cashier, and William H. Boll, assistant cashier, self-confessed looters of the City Bank of York, who entered pleas of guilty to a number of charges growing out of the stealing of over $1,000,000 funds of the bank. From 20 to 22 years in the Eastern penitentiary is the sentence meted to Baird, while Boll receives from 15 to 20 years in the same institution. Fines aggregating $15,500 were imposed upon Baird, and $8,000 upon Boll. Both of the once popular bankers of York have taken up their residences within the walls of the Eastern penitentiary, Philadelphia. As Baird is 58 years of age this will probably mean that he will end his life in prison. Boll is said to be less than 40 years of age. They accepted sentence calmly and made no comment. Many persons were present whose life savings had been squandered by the two prisoners. There, however, was no disorder. When called before the court Baird hung his head, while Boll at first looked squarely at the jurist.

Baird had to be helped through the small door by a uniformed prison guard at the penitentiary.

"Anything but jubilant," was Baird's reply to a query as to how he felt.

Boll hung his head as he replied, "I am not feeling at all well."

Since both men are experts on books they may be given jobs at bookkeeping in the penitentiary.

REMEMBER WHEN?

A dinner was served, 15 years ago Thursday, at the home of John Livingsperger, Edgemoor, in honor of his son Lawrence and wife.

John Wilson, aged about 40 years, an umbrella mender, was found dead in bed at the Altland House, Abbottstown, 15 years ago Saturday.

E. H. Berkheimer and Miss Nora Miller, both of Abbottstown, were married in Baltimore by the Rev. David Neely, 15 years ago Saturday.

Settlement has been made in the purchase of the property of the York Motor club by Dr. G. Emanuel Spatz. Dr. Spatz bought the property, which is east of York on the Lincoln highway, at public sale on June 1 at a bid of $18,200. The money has been deposited with the Security Title and Trust company. The building has 14 rooms and is an attractive type of Colonial architecture with large porches. The ground faces 120 feet on Lincoln highway and 250 feet on Vernon street. Dr. Spatz will remodel the building and probably occupy it as a residence.

William G. Weaver, a graduate of six years ago, was elected president of the Gettysburg high school alumni at the annual meeting at which 120 graduates were present.

Monroe Alleman left Tuesday for Orlando, Florida, where he will join his parents, he having remained in Littlestown to finish his school course.
